The Stanley Hotel, famous for inspiring Stephen King's novel "The Shining," tops the list of haunted inns in America. Perched atop the Rocky Mountains, this magnificent hotel has witnessed numerous ghostly encounters, from children playing in the halls to piano melodies resonating from the empty ballroom. One of the most famous spirits is Lucy, a mischievous ghost who frequents the fourth floor and enjoys interacting with guests.

2. The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Arkansas

If you seek paranormal thrills, the Crescent Hotel in Arkansas is the place to be. Built in the late 19th century, this luxurious establishment served as a cancer hospital in the 1930s. Many believe that the spirits of those who perished during this period roam its halls. Guests have reported ghostly encounters, such as hearing whispers and witnessing apparitions. The most infamous ghost is Michael, an Irish stonemason who oversees renovations even in the afterlife.

3. The Queen Mary Hotel, Long Beach, California

Once a glamorous ocean liner, the Queen Mary now serves as a hotel in the bustling city of Long Beach. This regal vessel has had its fair share of supernatural occurrences, with reports of ghostly sightings, strange noises, and eerie sensations. One of the most haunted areas is the first-class swimming pool, where swimmers have felt ghostly hands brushing against them. The spirits of numerous crew members and passengers who met their tragic end aboard the ship are said to haunt its decks.

4. The Lizzie Borden Bed and Breakfast, Fall River, Massachusetts

The Lizzie Borden Bed and Breakfast takes guests back in time to the infamous 1892 axe murders of Andrew and Abby Borden. This quaint inn still retains the eeriness surrounding the gruesome crime. Guests can explore the crime scenes and even spend the night in the rooms where the murders occurred. Many visitors claim to have heard whispered conversations and experienced strange occurrences during their stay.

5. The Myrtles Plantation, St. Francisville, Louisiana

Located in picturesque St. Francisville, the Myrtles Plantation holds a haunted reputation that draws in countless paranormal enthusiasts. It is said to be inhabited by at least 12 restless spirits. Legend has it that Chloe, a slave girl, was hanged on the property, and her spirit remains, haunting the plantation. Guests have reported sightings of apparitions, footsteps, and mysterious handprints on mirrors.

6. The Copper Queen Hotel, Bisbee, Arizona

Nestled in Bisbee's historic district, the Copper Queen Hotel boasts an inviting Victorian-era charm. With such a rich history, it is not surprising that supernatural occurrences have been reported within its walls. Ghostly voices, inexplicable cold spots, and items moving on their own have left guests bewildered. Reports suggest that several spirits reside in the hotel, including a mischievous little boy named Billy.

7. The Marshall House, Savannah, Georgia

The Marshall House in Savannah, Georgia, has witnessed the horrors of war, serving as a hospital during the Civil War and later as an infirmary during various yellow fever epidemics. Many believe that the spirits of soldiers and patients who met their demise in the building still linger. Guests have reported hearing phantom cries and feeling touches from unseen hands. The eerie atmosphere and historical artifacts add to the hotel's haunted allure.

8. The Congress Plaza Hotel, Chicago, Illinois

The Congress Plaza Hotel, located in the heart of downtown Chicago, has a dark and sinister reputation. The spirit of a deceased woman, known as "Peg Leg Johnny," allegedly haunts the hotel's eighth floor, causing disturbances and appearing in the form of a shadowy figure. Other eerie happenings include mysterious room temperature drops and unexplained noises echoing through the corridors.

9. The Sagamore Resort, Lake George, New York

Overlooking the stunning Lake George, the Sagamore Resort exudes elegance and charm. However, lurking within its splendid halls are ghostly apparitions that have left guests bewildered. The spirit of a Victorian-era woman named Isabel, dressed in a white gown, is said to haunt the resort. Guests have reported seeing her wandering near the lake and gazing mournfully into the distance.

10. The Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, Los Angeles, California

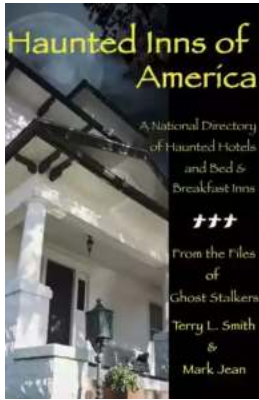

The Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, famous for hosting Hollywood stars, also has a dark side. Numerous celebrity ghosts are said to roam its halls, including Marilyn Monroe and Montgomery Clift. Guests have reported hearing whispers, feeling cold breath on their necks, and witnessing apparitions. Some claim that the full-length mirror in Monroe's suite has a supernatural allure that draws people in.

Whether you believe in the supernatural or not, the haunted inns of America have captured the imagination of many. From ghostly apparitions to unexplained phenomena, these establishments offer a unique and spine-tingling experience for those seeking a taste of the unknown. If you are brave enough, venture into the realms of these haunted inns and witness the enigmatic tales that have fascinated generations.
