

Kids Who Are Changing The World

In a world that often underestimates the potential of children, there are remarkable kids who are defying all odds and making a difference on a global scale. These extraordinary individuals, driven by their passion and determination, are reshaping their communities, inspiring millions, and challenging the status quo. Here, we celebrate a few select kids who are changing the world in ways that will truly leave you in awe.

The Young Activist: Emma Gonzalez

At just 19 years old, Emma Gonzalez emerged as a leading voice in the fight against gun violence after surviving the tragic shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida, in 2018. Alongside her fellow students, Gonzalez founded the advocacy group named "Never Again MSD" that seeks to promote gun control measures and challenge the influence of the National Rifle Association (NRA). Through her powerful speeches and relentless activism, she has become a symbol of hope for a generation determined to make a safer world.

Despite facing immense criticism and threats, Gonzalez remains unfazed in her pursuit for change. Her unwavering dedication has not only contributed to new legislation but has also encouraged students worldwide to speak up and demand action. Emma Gonzalez represents the power of youth, proving that age is no barrier in the fight for justice and societal transformation.

The Environmentalist: Greta Thunberg

Climate change has become an urgent global crisis, with dire consequences for future generations. Within this context, Greta Thunberg, a teenager from Sweden, has emerged as a prominent environmental activist who is reshaping the way the world perceives climate change. With her passionate speeches and fearless determination, she has inspired millions of young people to join the fight against environmental destruction.

Greta Thunberg has been instrumental in mobilizing youth-led movements, such as Fridays for Future, where students all over the world protest to demand government action on climate change. Her unwavering commitment and refusal to compromise have compelled world leaders to pay attention, resulting in tangible policy changes and heightened awareness about the environmental crisis.

The Tech Prodigy: Tanmay Bakshi

While most kids spend their time playing video games, Tanmay Bakshi, a Canadian tech prodigy, was busy revolutionizing the tech industry. From the tender age of five, Bakshi showcased his exceptional programming skills and has become a renowned AI expert. He has appeared on TED Talks, authored a book on machine learning, and has collaborated with major tech companies.

Bakshi's passion for coding has led him to create innovative solutions for climate change, healthcare, and education. He aims to make AI accessible and inclusive for all, promoting the idea that anyone, regardless of age, can make a significant impact in the technology sector. Tanmay Bakshi is inspiring a new generation of young developers and challenging traditional notions of what can be accomplished at a young age.

The Social Entrepreneur: Mikaila Ulmer

Mikaila Ulmer, at the age of ten, founded a lemonade company called "Me & the Bees" that uses locally sourced, organic honey as a key ingredient. What began as a small project to address the declining bee population quickly evolved into a thriving business that promotes sustainability and raises awareness about the importance of bees to our ecosystem.

Ulmer's lemonade has garnered national attention, winning her numerous awards and recognition. Beyond the commercial success, her company contributes a portion of the profits to organizations working towards the conservation of bees. Mikaila Ulmer serves as a prime example of how young entrepreneurs can channel their ideas into profitable ventures while also making a positive impact on society.

The Inspirational Writer: Marley Dias

Marley Dias, an accomplished young writer, created the #1000BlackGirlBooks campaign at the age of eleven to address the lack of diverse representation in children's literature. Dias collected and donated over a thousand books that feature black girls as the main characters, aiming to empower young readers and challenge prevailing stereotypes.

This initiative not only raised awareness about the importance of diverse storytelling but also motivated publishing companies to rethink their approach to inclusion. Marley Dias exemplifies how one person's determination can spark a movement and create profound and lasting change in the literary world and beyond.

The Future Philanthropist: Ryan Hickman

At the age of eight, Ryan Hickman embarked on a mission to save the environment, one recycling bag at a time. He founded his own recycling company, Ryan's Recycling, and has since collected and recycled over a million cans and bottles.

Hickman's environmental efforts have been recognized globally, earning him awards and putting him at the forefront of the sustainability movement. Through his endeavors, he highlights the importance of recycling and the positive impact even one person can make. Ryan Hickman is a role model for kids everywhere, reminding us that we all have the power to create a greener planet.

These incredible kids are proving that age is no barrier to making a significant impact on the world. From advocating for gun control to tackling climate change and fostering diversity, these young change-makers are rewriting the narrative and inspiring others to take action. Their determination, passion, and unwavering belief in their causes serve as a reminder that every individual possesses the power to change the world, regardless of their age. As we celebrate the accomplishments of these extraordinary kids, let us be inspired by their stories and support their endeavors, because when kids change the world, the future becomes brighter for all.
