As I delved into Annie Caulfield's story, I couldn't help but notice remarkable similarities between us. We both shared a love for adventure, storytelling, and a burning desire to make a positive impact in the world. It was as if we were mirror images of each other, separated by thousands of miles.

Driven by an overwhelming curiosity, I reached out to Annie Caulfield through social media, expressing my astonishment at our similarities. To my surprise, she responded enthusiastically, sharing her own intrigue about the coincidence. We decided to connect further and exchange stories about our lives.

Through our conversations, Annie and I discovered that we not only had similar interests and aspirations, but also eerily parallel life experiences. We both grew up in small towns, faced similar challenges, and even shared identical birth dates. It was as if our destinies were intertwined from the moment we were born.

Excited by our extraordinary connection, Annie and I decided to meet in person. I traveled to Cambodia, eager to see my 'twin' and experience her world. The moment we met, it felt like meeting a long-lost sibling. We laughed, cried, and shared our deepest thoughts and dreams.

During my time with Annie, I had the privilege of witnessing her incredible work firsthand. She led humanitarian projects, worked with local communities, and inspired countless individuals with her relentless dedication. Seeing her impact on the lives of others further solidified our connection.

As I returned home, I couldn't help but reflect on the impact Annie Caulfield had on my life. Our meeting not only strengthened our bond but also ignited a new sense of purpose within me. Inspired by Annie's work, I decided to take on my own humanitarian initiatives and make a difference in my own community.

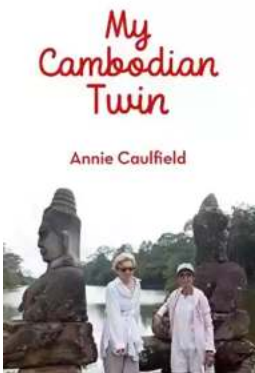

The story of my Cambodian twin, Annie Caulfield, is a testament to the power of connection and the remarkable coincidences life has to offer. It reminds us that no matter the distance or circumstances, real connections can transcend borders and bring people together.

So, if you ever come across a story that catches your interest, don't be afraid to reach out and explore the possibilities. You never know, you might just discover your own 'twin' in the most unexpected of places.

Siem Reap, Cambodia. And Annie Caulfield is discovering the country under the bossy guidance of a gifted, entertaining, irritable and effortlessly stylish Cambodian woman. Sophea Kagna is a practitioner of a sacred ancient dance that was almost wiped out by the Khmer Rouge. She is on a mission to preserve the sacred past of Cambodian dance and give it back to ordinary people – and determined that Annie will help her. As Annie discovers the country, she also learns her guide’s extraordinary life story. Sophea’s childhood was scarred by the murderous insanity of Pol Pot, a dark chapter of modern Cambodian history from which the country is still trying to recover.

Funny and poignant in equal measure, My Cambodian Twin charts the travels and friendship of two extraordinary woman. A BBC Radio Four play, also called My Cambodian Twin, about Annie’s struggle to finish this book was broadcast in May 2019.
