The Lost City of Ubar

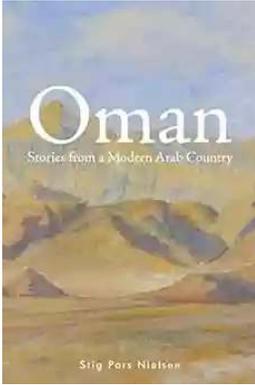

Deep in the Arabian desert lies the legendary lost city of Ubar. Mentioned in the Quran and referred to as the "Atlantis of the Sands," Ubar was known for its prosperous trade and wealth. For centuries, its location remained a mystery, until a team of archaeologists led by Sir Ranulph Fiennes discovered the ancient ruins in Oman's Rub' al Khali desert. Exploring the remains of this once thriving city is like stepping back in time, immersing yourself in the tales of the past.

Frankincense Trade

Oman's history is deeply intertwined with the Frankincense trade, which dates back thousands of years. Frankincense, a precious resin extracted from the Boswellia tree, has been used for its aromatic properties since ancient times. Oman, particularly the region of Dhofar, was a major hub for the trade, with caravans journeying through treacherous desert routes to transport this valuable commodity. The Frankincense Land Museum in Salalah is an excellent place to learn more about this fascinating trade and its significance in Omani culture.
