Everywhere we turn, we see the signs of a modern society in crisis. From climate change, to poverty and social exclusion, to war and terrorism, we are bombarded with information about the impasse we've reached.

This is a book about how this happened.

In this wise and intellectually challenging work, psychoanalyst and social scientist, Dr. Norberto Keppe, critiques the totally erroneous orientation that modern science has been following that has taken us from our true path.

“In truth,” says Keppe, “We are living in an era where science is not science, philosophy is not philosophy and, worst of all, theology is not theology, and so we are left with a bunch of beliefs that are far from reality.”

Worse still, humanity has not realized this, and so continues to follow these erroneous philosophies. Keppe corrects these errors and reveals again the universal knowledge within that is still present and waiting to be accepted. We have only to do so, Keppe contends, and we will rapidly move forward in development of civilization.
