Joining the Soviet Army

At the outbreak of World War II, Roza Shanina, only 18 years old, decided to enlist in the Soviet Army to defend her homeland against the invading Nazi forces. Her knack for accuracy soon earned her a place at the Central Female Sniper Academy in Podolsk.

Despite facing immense challenges and discrimination due to her gender, Shanina persevered and graduated at the top of her class. Her sharpshooting skills and determination caught the attention of her superiors, who eventually assigned her to the 184th Rifle Division.

Becoming the Legend

During her time on the Eastern Front, Shanina took part in numerous combat operations. Her diary, which recorded her experiences and thoughts, provides insight into the daily life of a soldier during the war years. The war diary of Roza Shanina has become a historical treasure that vividly depicts the horrors of war and the strength of human spirit.

Shanina's exceptional skills as a sniper allowed her to take down 59 enemy soldiers, making her one of the deadliest marksmen of the war. Her accuracy and precision were unparalleled, and her skills proved pivotal in several critical battles.

Despite facing the constant danger and witnessing the atrocities of war, Shanina remained undeterred. Her dedication to defending her homeland and her unwavering commitment to her fellow soldiers made her an inspiration to many.

The Legacy

Tragically, Roza Shanina's life was cut short on January 28, 1945, when she was fatally wounded during the East Prussian Offensive. She was only 20 years old at the time of her death. Her remarkable achievements and unwavering bravery continue to inspire people around the world.

Over the years, several historical novels have been written about Roza Shanina, each capturing her extraordinary life and contributions to the war effort. These novels transport readers back in time, allowing them to experience the hardships and triumphs alongside Shanina.

***Part of Historical Novels series***

Roza Shanina was an exceptional, legendary sniper during World War II, a brave female-soldier known for her beauty, high moral qualities and shooting accuracy. She was credited with fifty-nine confirmed kills, including twelve soldiers during the Battle of Vilnius. And she also kept a diary – a document unique in its content, which reveals to the world the unknown side of war.

Translated for the first time into the English language by a professional translator, the war diary of Roza Shanina is a unique piece of history, since diaries were strictly prohibited in the Soviet military in an effort to preserve secrecy. Not only can we glimpse into the past to a time when war and conflict shaped personalities and turned ordinary men and women into warriors and sometimes heroes, but also experience the war through the eyes of a young—sometimes impressionable, sometimes sensitive, sometimes ruthless—girl.

The diary also serves as the best description of Roza's personality – a girl who decided to fight for her homeland, to defend the honor and dignity of her country in the ruthless battles against the enemy.

But Roza remained, above all, human – never giving in to the temptation of revenge, capable of empathy, having her own weaknesses and vulnerabilities. All this is best revealed in her diary, to which she entrusted everything and through which she, unknowingly, addressed all people – her unknown readers.
